

Learning

The natural, unstoppable process of acquiring knowledge and mastery. The vast majority of the learning in your life doesn't happen when you're a kid in school. We do it everywhere, all day long, by reading, writing, conversing, tinkering with the world around us, playing around, solving problems, asking questions, and messing up. A teacher can't make you learn, any more than a coach can run a race for you. It's something the learner drives and seeks. We're all teachers and learners.
